

Democracy requires that citizens are fairly exposed to the "marketplace" of ideas. Consolidation of ownership of broadcast and print media increases the risk that a small number of organizations with overlapping interests will bias their reporting in a manner that will effectively limit or manipulate citizen's awareness and understanding of important issues.

Therefore, I urge the FCC to choose policies that will encourage diversity in ownership and management of media providers.